

Sagwitch, Shoshone leader (and his wife)

BEAR RIVER BATTLE SITE FIELD TRIP

SEPTEMBER 19, 2009

Sponsored by the Fort Douglas Museum

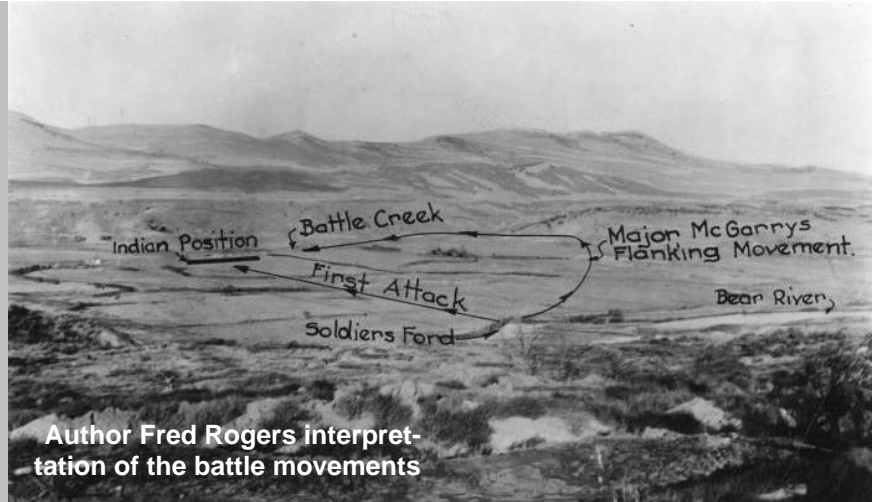

Colonel P. Edward Connor, troop commander

Battle or massacre? Historians still debate the events of that cold winter day in January 1863 when soldiers from Camp Douglas attacked a village of Shoshone on the Bear River near the Utah-Idaho border. Follow the route of the soldiers as they marched north from Camp Douglas and walk the site of the actual battle. An informative and thought-provoking day exploring Utah's historic past.

The tour departs from the Fort Douglas Museum at 9 a.m. and will return about 5 p.m. Parking available at the museum.

Cost: $65 per person (includes transportation, lunch, guide and field trip booklet).

For reservations, please call:
801-581-1251

Author Fred Rogers interpretation of the battle movements

Artist's depiction of Colonel Connor's return to Camp Douglas with scout Porter Rockwell