Summary Paragraph

The Matthew M. and Johanna S. Rowan House is a 1½-story central-block-with-projecting bays-type house with Victorian Eclectic styling completed in 1887.¹ The house is located at 198 West Winchester Street (6400 South) in Murray, Salt Lake County, Utah. The house is constructed of multi-hued red brick and sits on a granite rubblestone foundation. The house exterior has had only minor modifications and is very good condition. The interior of the house retains most of its architectural details but has had minor modifications, including the addition of kitchen, bathroom and removal of fireplaces. The house is located on a 0.26-acre parcel and there is a non-contributing garage and root cellar associated with the property. The immediate neighborhood is a mix of residential neighborhoods, interstate freeway, a streetcar line, and commercial/warehouses. The Rowan retains its architectural integrity design, materials, workmanship, location, association and feeling. The setting has been somewhat compromised by the loss of the surrounding farmland to development, but this does not impact the architectural significance. The property meets the registration requirements of the Historic Resources of Murray City, Utah, 1859-1967 Multiple Property Listing and Submission (MPS) within the Residential Buildings and Associated Secondary Buildings/Structures property type category. The Matthew M. and Johanna Rowan House retains its architectural integrity and is a significant local contributing resource.

¹ Salt Lake County tax assessment records show the first assessment for the house in 1887 although it might have been constructed during 1886 after the land was purchased by Matthew Rowan.

Narrative Description

Exterior

The Matthew M. and Johanna Rowan House is an excellent example of early Victorian central-block-with-projecting bays-type house in the Salt Lake valley. The Victorian Eclectic elements include a projecting octagonal bay on the façade (south elevation) with dog-toothed brickwork on slightly two recessed panels, low-arched brick lintels, carved wood scrollwork details, two separate front entry doors with transom windows, and narrow double-hung one-over-one windows with wood sills. The roof is hipped with multiple ridges. The roof was originally wood-shingled but now has asphalt shingles. Two of three chimneys remain, and one retains decorative Victorian corbelled brickwork.² The foundation is rock-faced ashlar granite blocks.

The contains the octagonal bay on west and large front porch with Victorian style roof on the east. The octagonal bay has a central fixed window with transom. There are narrow double-hung one-over-one windows on the projecting angles. The projecting angles are slightly recessed and have decorative dog-tooth brick details. The windows have low-arched two-layered brickwork lintels with the bricks on end showing their header face. The octagonal bay windows have decorative scrollwork between panels and below the arched lintels. All windows are original and in good condition, with some damage to wood muntins and sills. The house soffit and fascia are wood and remains in good condition. The porch is concrete and was added prior to 1938.³ The doors are not original, but the transom windows above each door are original and in good condition. The two double-hung one-over-one windows behind the porch have decorative wood trim which matches the interior door and transom moldings rather than the bay windows.

The east elevation is brick over granite foundation and contains one double-hung tall, narrow one-over-one window with low-arched lintel. The roof has been penetrated with a small vertical wood siding covered eyebrow dormer addition, which is not historic. The original screen porch was modified prior to 1958 to both enclose the screen porch and open a staircase to the upper floor from the interior.⁴ The enclosure has a low-slope roof and vertical wood paneling with two French doors.

The rear (north) elevation contains one tall, narrow window which matches the profile of other windows on the sides of the house and an unusual extra narrow one-over-one, double-hung window. This façade has some mortar damage to the brickwork and foundation, some of which has been patched with caulking, but is in overall good condition. The roof has a large vertical wood sided eyebrow style dormer with a casement window.

The west elevation contains a two-panel double-hung, one-over-one window which matches the window on the porch, including decorative trim molding, arched lintel and wood sills. The brick lintel over the window has some loss of mortar and shifting of brick, but otherwise this elevation is in good condition.

² Salt Lake County Tax Records for 198 West Winchester Street.

³ The porch was not original in 1887 but existed on 1938 tax appraisal cards.

⁴ It is likely that the modification occurred after Matthew V Rowan died in 1957 and his nephew Marlin Andersen lived in the house and remodeled it according to Murray City historical research. The addition was absent on the 1938 tax assessment card and noted on the 1958 tax assessment card. McHenry, Vera ed. Murray Historic Showcase.

Interior

The interior contains 954 square feet divided into a living room, two bedrooms, a bathroom and kitchen. All walls, except the kitchen and bath, are original plaster and include decorative wood baseboard and door molding. All interior doors are also original with operable transom windows between rooms. The ceilings are nine to ten feet high. The floors in bedrooms and living room are original four-inch pine. The kitchen and bath were added in 1949 and are not historic. The floors in these rooms are tile. In the pre-1958 remodel, the wall on the north side of the rear porch was penetrated and a narrow wooden staircase was added to open the upper floor.

Setting/Site

The Rowan House sits on 0.26 acres on Winchester Street in Murray. The property is rectangular and has some mature trees and landscaping. The property was originally a 2³/₄-acre lot which has been subdivided several times to its current size.⁵ There is a newer house on a separate parcel (flag lot) to the rear. The house has a 1941 garage and a large root cellar with a concrete above-ground entry, which are non-contributing outbuildings since they were built outside of the period of significance. This area originally was a farming area on the outskirts of Murray and has developed into a residential area with some commercial development to the west along the railroad tracks and interstate freeway. In the 1960 and 1970s, Interstate 215 was developed directly to the north of the property.⁶ The Murray South Station of the Trax light rail line borders the property to the west.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

The Matthew M. and Johanna S. Rowan House, completed in 1887, is a 1½-story Victorian Eclectic brick cottage, located at 198 W. Winchester Street in Murray, Utah. The house is locally significant under Criteria C in the area of Architecture and was built by Matthew M. and Johanna S. Rowan, early settlers on the west side of Murray. The period of significance is the year of construction of the house, 1887. Matthew M. Rowan died in 1891. In the area of Architecture, the house is significant as the earliest known central-block-with-projecting-bay-type house built in Murray. This Victorian house type, in which bays were added to provide external irregularity and larger rooms, was popular in Utah beginning around 1885. In rural Murray, the design of the Rowan House would have influenced later examples of the type. The property has excellent architectural integrity with some minor modifications to the rear and interior. The property is eligible under the Multiple Property Submission (MPS), Historic Resources of Murray City, 1859-1967. Because the Murray MPS is organized by building types, the associated historic context is the “Early Residential and Agricultural Buildings of Murray, 1850 – 1910.”

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

Architectural Significance

The Matthew M. and Johanna S. Rowan house is the earliest example of the Victorian central-block-with-projecting-bays type house in Murray. The central-block-with-projecting-bays was the most popular house type in Utah during the Victorian period between 1885 and 1915. This house type could be one or two-stories with a central pyramidal roof over a roughly square footprint. Projecting bays were added to the principal main floor rooms making them larger and brighter than earlier house types such as cross-wings and central or side passages. The central-block-with-projecting-bays house type was particularly suited to the prevailing tastes of Victorian domestic architecture: asymmetrical façades, irregular floor plans, compartmentalized interior spaces, and a variety of exterior ornamentation and materials.⁷

Utah builders were quick to embrace the style after the railroad brought architectural pattern books in the 1870s. With a lack of wood, brick was the predominant material in Utah during this period and the central-block house was especially popular with brick masons. Because of the nearby smelters, Murray had several early brickyards and brick was the most common building material in the community by the 1880s.

The Rowan House is one of only sixteen examples of central-block-with-projecting-bays-type houses that retain historical integrity remaining in Murray. The house predates the next two closest remaining central block houses by four years.⁸ The majority of central-block houses in Murray were built between 1898 and 1908. Because it is an early example, the Rowan House is relatively plain in architectural detail compared to the later more elaborate examples. It is notable that three other central-block houses were built on Winchester Street in the 1890s.⁹

⁷ Thomas Carter and Peter Goss, Utah's Historic Architecture, 1847-1940, (Salt Lake City, Utah: University of Utah Press, 1988): 44.

The Matthew M. and Johanna S. Rowan House is a very good early example of Victorian central-block-with-projecting bays-type house in the Salt Lake Valley. The Victorian eclectic style elements include a projecting octagonal bay on the front (south) facing façade with dog-toothed brickwork on two slightly recessed panels, low-arched brick lintels, carved scrollwork details, two separate front entry doors with transom windows, and narrow double-hung one-over-one windows with wood sills. Additional Historic Context

Peter Hansen recorded the official U.S. Government Patent to the property on March 5, 1875, but the area had actually been settled since the early 1850s. Peter Hansen officially recorded the property sale in Salt Lake County deed records to George C. Watts on December 16, 1874. George C. and Rebecca Bawden Watts moved to this area in 1867 and farmed this property while living near 6400 South State Street.¹⁰ George C. Watts sold the property to Susan Winkworth on November 6, 1884. She owned the property just over two years, selling it to Matthew M. Rowan December 9, 1886.

The Rowan family is associated with European settlement of the Salt Lake Valley. Matthew M.'s father, Matthew Rowan Sr. was one of the early settlers to locate to the South Cottonwood (later Murray) area in 1856. He was a significant figure in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, including ecclesiastical assignments in the first ward to form in the area. Matthew Sr. also taught school at the local South Cottonwood Ward primary school in 1860, one of the first local school organizations in the area.¹¹ The Rowan family also allowed the schoolhouse to be located on their property, which the Swenson family later lived in after immigrating to Utah.¹²

Matthew M and Johanna S. Rowan were also associated with many of the families identified by Murray City histories as significant area residents, including the families of Peter Hansen, George C. Watts, Thomas Mackay, Jacob Erickson, and the Winchesters.¹³ All of these families were associated for many years with agriculture and community development on the west side of Murray, Utah.

In addition to the early settlement, this house is associated with a group of Swedish immigrants who lived in the South Cottonwood area and have connections throughout the history of this house. Johanna Swenson Rowan and family emigrated from Sweden. Matthew Rowan Sr.'s second wife was Anna Olsen, also from Sweden. In addition, the Erickson family was also of Swedish descent.¹⁴

Matthew Martin Rowan was the second son of English immigrant parents Matthew Rowan and Jane Martin, who had emigrated in 1855 with other early pioneers of the Church of Jesus Christ of latter-day Saints and in March 1856 settled in the Cottonwood area just west of the house at 198 West Winchester Street.¹⁵ Matthew Martin Rowan was born August 28, 1859 in Cottonwood, Utah. He grew up nearby on his father's 56-acre farm and worked as a farmer with his stepmother Anna Olsen Rowan after his father's death January 7, 1866. Matthew Martin Rowan married Johanna "Hannah" Swenson April 24, 1884 in South Cottonwood. Johanna was born May 21, 1863 in Evarod, Skane, Sweden to Peter Trulson

Swenson and Kjerste Nilson Swenson, who immigrated in June 1872 to Utah with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and settled on part of the Rowan family farm.¹⁶ The Swenson family rented the Rowan family house from Matthew Sr.'s widow and second wife Anna Olsen Rowan, who he married in February 23, 1862 after the death of his wife Jane Martin Rowan January 8, 1862.

Matthew Martin Rowan purchased 2¾ acres from Susan Winkworth in 1886 and constructed the current house on this small property between 1886 and 1887.¹⁷ Matthew and Johanna had three children between 1885 and 1890, Matthew Verner Rowan, Hazel Jane Rowan and Milo LeGrande Rowan. Matthew Martin Rowan died at age 32 on September 21, 1891, leaving Johanna a widow with three small children. Shortly after becoming a widow, she was joined by her parents Peter and Kjerste Swenson, who she cared for until their deaths in 1909 and 1914 respectively.¹⁸ Johanna continued to farm and resided at 198 West Winchester Street until her death on May 11, 1926.¹⁹

Matthew Verner Rowan, the oldest child of Matthew Martin and Johanna Rowan, was born in South Cottonwood February 7, 1885, attended school through the eighth grade and helped his mother on the farm.²⁰ Matthew V. Rowan never married and lived in the house at 198 West Winchester Street his entire life. Although Matthew began as a farmer, he soon began working for the local smelter. Matthew V. Rowan worked for United States Smelting, Refining and Mining Company in Midvale for more than 30 years prior to his retirement.²¹ He lived with his mother until her death in 1926 and resided alone at the house until his death on November 4, 1957.²²

On September 1, 1948, Matthew V. Rowan transferred title to the property to his only sister, Hazel Jane Rowan Erickson, who lived at 170 East Winchester Street until her death January 30, 1955.²³ Various members of the Erickson family owned the property until September 8, 1982 when it was sold to Douglas and Karen Lundeen.²⁴ Murray City historical documents identify that Marlin Andersen, a grandson of Matthew M. and Johanna Rowan, lived in the house for many years.²⁵

Douglas and Karen Lundeen owned the property and resided there until July 15, 1996 when the property was sold to Javier Viana, who owned the property until February 10, 2004 when it was sold to the current owners Matthew and Ashley Jackson.
